

About the Author

The author, Dr. David Sowell, is a specialist in the social and labor history of nineteenth-century Colombia. He joined the faculty of Juniata College in 1989 after teaching appointments at Fort Hays State University, Allegheny College, and the University of South Carolina. Professor Sowell earned his Ph.D. from the University of Florida under the direction of Dr. David Bushnell. His The Early Colombian Labor Movement: Artisans and Politics in Bogotá, 1832-1919 has been published by Temple University Press. Other publications include Santander y la opinión Angloamericana: Visión de viajeros y periódicos, 1821-1840 and articles in the Hispanic American Historical Review, Latin American Labor News, and the Journal of Latin American Studies. Professor Sowell is currently preparing a book-length manuscript on "Latin American Social Violence."

The author gratefully acknowledges the History Department and Sigma Iota Rho for their support of the lecture series. He especially appreciates the assistance of Kim Richardson, Sharon Cramer-Bratton, David Hsiung, Karen Wiley Sandler, Peter Peregrine, and the students of the 1492 class of the fall semester 1992. The author is deeply indebted to William E. Russey for his professionalism and commitment to quality in the preparation of this publication. All errors are the responsibility of the author.

Professor Sowell is married to Christine Sowell and is the proud parent of Emily, who, like many of her generation, wonders why anyone could ever have praised Columbus and other European conquerors as heroes. To her and to her generation this effort is dedicated.
